The Anchorage York Rite is proudly occupying its new office building. The structure houses not only Anchorage York Rite, but the Alaska Grand York Rite as well. The edifice has been a long time in planning and is the result of funds set aside specifically for this purpose. The location is within sight of the Anchorage Masonic Center at 15th and Eagle Street in Anchorage. The building has an elevator, conference room, and reading/research area in addition to office space where the Alaska Masonic Library & Museum is now located.

Sir Knight David A. Hunt, Eminent Grand Recorder/Treasurer is getting settled in and trying to sort out the confusion which always results from a move of this magnitude.

As I write this month's supplement, the Grand Court of Alaska Order of the Amaranth is holding its annual 2007 Sessions. Some attending members' cars are parked in front of this new structure. The Amaranth is well known as a concordant organization which concentrates its charitable foundation efforts with generous contributions to the American Diabetes Association.
